* As u in gude, in the Scotch language.

† Sounded as u in but.

‡ The vowel preceding the hyphen is the one intended to represent the French pronunciation.

§ Sounded as u in but, with gn liquid.

|| Sounded as u in but, with ll liquid.

COMPARATIVE VIEW OF THE ALPHABET.

The thirty-one characters, simple or combined, exhibited in the Table, by no means produce thirty-one distinct or original sounds, which are limited to twenty, although thirty-one characters are employed to emit them; the reason is, that some consonants have no power whatever.

1st, B and P are alike, with the exception that p is stronger than b.

2dly, C hard, ch hard, k and q, are all alike, and C soft has the same sound as the hissing s.

3dly, D and T are alike, except that t is stronger than d.

4thly, F and V are alike, with the exception that f is stronger than v.

5thly, G hard, c hard, ch hard, k and q, are alike, except that c hard, ch hard, k and q, are stronger than g. G soft is nothing else than j.

6thly, J is the soft sound of G.

7thly, S and Z are alike, except that s is stronger than z.

8thly, X has no power, for it is represented by k, ks, gz, s, and z.

9thly, Y and i are alike.

10thly, & has no power, for it is represented by et.

11thly, Ch hard and k are alike, and ch soft is the hard sound of G soft.

12thly, Gn hard, are represented by g hard and n.

It results from the above comparative view, that real consonants, simple or combined, are reduced to the following; namely, c hard, f, g, h, l, m, n, p, r, s, t, gn liquid, ll liquid, making in all thirteen original sounds; and adding to it the seven sounds of the vowels, a, e, i, o, u, eu, ou, it will be found that twenty sounds is the total number exhibited in the Table.

SECTION II.

SIGNS OF ACCENTS AND OF PUNCTUATION.

| Signs. | French. | English. | Signs. | French. | English. |
|--------|--------------------|---------------------|---------|----------------------|--------------------|
| (`) | accent aigu | close accent | (-) | tiret | hyphen |
| (`) | accent grave | open accent | (...) | points suspensifs | elliptical points |
| (^) | accent circonflexe | circumflex accent | (—) | traits de séparation | interlocutory dash |
| (¨) | tréma | diæresis | (") | guillemets | quotation |
| (¨) | cédille | cedilla | (") | | |
| (') | apostrophe | apostrophe | (...) | | |
| (`) | brève | short | ({) | accolade | brace |
| (`) | longue | long | () | section | section |
| (,) | virgule | comma | (¶) | paragraphe | paragraph |
| (;) | point et virgule | semicolon | (¶) | renvoi | obelisk |
| (:) | deux points | colon | (*) | astérisque | asterisk |
| (.) | point | period | (...) | chapitre | chapter |
| (?) | point interrogatif | interrogation point | (...) | article | head |
| (!) | point exclamatif | exclamation point | (...) | alinéa | new line |
| () | parenthèse | parenthesis | (...) | numéro | number |

DEFINITIONS OF THE ACCENTS.

1st, The close accent is merely intended to shut the sound of the vowel e. It is never seen but on that letter.

2dly, The open accent opens the sound of the e in a certain degree, but has no power when put on a in là, there; on e in dés, since; and on u in où, where; for it is merely to distinguish these three words from la, the; des, some; and ou, or.

3dly, The circumflex accent opens the sound of the e in a broad manner, and renders it long also. When it is put upon u in dû, owed; sûr, sure; and in mûr, ripe; it is merely to distinguish these words from du, of the; sur, upon; and mur, wall.

4thly, The diæresis indicates that the vowel on which it is placed forms a separate sound, as in naïveté, innocence; where a and i are sounded as na-i-vé-té.

5thly, The cedilla is used when c precedes a, o, u, as in Français, Frenchman; garçon, boy; reçu, received; in which words c would be sounded hard were it not for the cedilla.

6thly, The apostrophe is used to replace a vowel that has been suppressed; as l'esprit, the mind; for le esprit.

7thly, The short accent is employed to denote short syllables, as pâvôlè, word.

8thly, The long accent is used to point out long syllables, as raison, reason.

DEFINITIONS OF THE SIGNS OF PUNCTUATION.

1st, The comma is used to separate those parts of a sentence which require a pause between them, or to point out a parenthesis. See parenthesis, 7th paragraph.

2dly, The semicolon is used for dividing a compound sentence into two or more parts.

3dly, The colon is used to divide a sentence into parts forming nearly distinct sentences.

It is used after the words savoir, suivant, and in general before a quotation.

4thly, The period is used when a sentence is complete.

5thly, The interrogation point is used at the end of a question, whether direct or not.

6thly, The exclamation point is applied to sudden emotion, as surprise, joy, grief.

7thly, The parenthesis is a clause containing some useful information or necessary remark.

8thly, The hyphen is employed, 1. in connecting compound words, as arc-en-ciel, rainbow; 2. between verbs and the pronouns je, tu, il, nous, vous, ils, in questions, as parlais-je did I speak? 3. between très and the word that follows, as très-bon, very good; 4. between verbs and the objective pronouns, le, la, les, moi, toi, lui, nous, vous, leur, as parlez- moi, speak to me; 5. between verbs and the pronouns en, y, ce, on, as part-on? are we going? 6. before ci and là, as celui-ci, this; celui-là, that; 7. after entre in all reciprocal verbs, as s'entre-queller, to quarrel with one another.

9thly, The marginal hyphen is used to connect the syllables of a divided word.

10thly, Elliptical points are used to express a pause, an uncertainty, a suspension, or an internal feeling that cannot be uttered.

11thly, The interlocutory dash is used instead of names in dialogues, and replaces such words as dit-il, said he; dit-elle, said she.

12thly, The inverted commas serve to mark a quotation, and are generally placed at the beginning of a phrase or passage transcribed from an author.

DEFINITIONS OF SIGNS IN WRITING.

1st, The brace is used to connect two lines or more into one, so as to save repetition.

2thly, The section is sometimes used to show the division of a discourse.

3thly, The paragraph denotes the beginning of a subject, and is chiefly confined to the Bible.

4thly, The obelisk is used as a reference to the margin or bottom of the page.

5thly, The index points out a remarkable passage, or something requiring peculiar attention.

6thly, The asterisk, like the obelisk, is used as a reference to the margin, or the bottom of the page.

7thly, Chapter is understood to be one of the first divisions of a work or book.

8thly, Head is in general taken in the sense of chief argument. A discourse may have six or seven heads or points.

9thly, The new line is used at the end of a paragraph.

10thly, The word numéro, when rendered in English by number, is used for ciphers, for numbers on the doors of houses, and for those in the directions of letters.

SECTION III.

REGULAR VOWELS.

Vowels are Regular when pronounced as written.

Vowels are of seven different sorts: namely, Regular, Irregular, Pure, Nasal, Simple, Combined, and Diphthongs. The following are Regular:—

| Species. | Primitive Vowels. | Derivative Vowels. | Quality of the Sound. | Quantity of the Sound. | French Standard. | Approximate English Standard. |
|------------------|-------------------|---------------------------|---------------------------|------------------------|------------------|----------------------------------|
| Single Vowels. | A | a | slender | short | mal | a in mat |
| | | â | broad | long | mâle | a in maw |
| | | â | close | short | fa | a in mate |
| | | à | open slender | short | fa | e in met |
| | | â | open broad | long | fa | e in met, but broader and longer |
| | E | e | guttural | short | je | u in muff |
| | | e | mute | | | e in likely |
| | | i | | short | il | l in mill |
| | | i | both have the same sound. | long | lie | i in bee |
| | | o | slender | short | mol | o in not |
| O | ô | deep | long | môle | o in no | |
| | o | open | short | mort | o in nor | |
| | u | both have the same sound. | short | suc | both, about, | |
| | û | | long | sure | as u in gude* | |
| Combined Vowels. | OU | ou | both have the same sound. | short | jour | oo in mood |
| | | ou | | long | joûte | oo in noose |
| | | eu | slender | short | jeu | u in muff |
| | EU | eû | deep | long | jeûne | u in muff, but deeper and longer |
| Nasal Vowels. | AN | an | broad | long | pan | a in wrang |
| | IN | in | do. | do. | pin | e in strength |
| | ON | on | do. | do. | bon | o in wrong |
| | UN | un | do. | do. | brun | u in wrung |

* In the Scotch language.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE ABOVE REGULAR VOWELS.

1st, Primitive vowels mean original sounds. They are eleven in number. From them are derived all other sounds or vowels.

2dly, Derivative vowels or sounds are only twenty-two in number, although twenty-three are to be found in the Table. This irregularity is owing to e guttural having the same sound as eu, which is a primitive sound.

The Learner will observe there are two a's, five e's, two i's, three o's, two u's, two ou's, three eu's, and four nasal sounds. Among the French vowels, eu and ê deep are the only ones having no corresponding sound in English.

3dly, Quality of the sound applies to the difference existing between close, open, slender, broad, and deep.

4thly, Quantity of the sound expresses the length, as short and long.

SECTION IV.

IRREGULAR SINGLE VOWELS.

SECTION VII.

ON NASAL SOUNDS.

On the Propriety of Sounding or not the n final of a Syllable having the Nasal Sound.

The occasional articulation of the final n attending a nasal sound, appearing somewhat arbitrary, the following lines are intended to do away with that impression, and to show also that the n at the end of a nasal sound is never articulated, but in virtue of certain laws that are established, and which ought to be strictly followed. The difficulties attending the propriety of articulating or not the n when final nasal, may be resolved into three heads.

First, when the final n ought to be connected with the following initial vowels, as ancien ami, old friend. Secondly, when it should not be connected, as ce vin est bon, this wine is good. Thirdly, when the nasal sound should be omitted entirely. These three cases will now be explained in a methodical manner, in the course of the following four Rules, illustrative of the powers belonging to the French nasal vowels.

56.—N sounded.

N final attending a nasal sound is never sounded, unless the word to which it belongs be essentially connected with the next.

From the above general rule it results that n final nasal is sounded in the following cases:—

1st, Article and substantive, un homme, a man.—Pronounce ãn no-m, (162.)

2d, Adjective and substantive; bon écolier, good scholar.—Pronounce Bõn né-co-lié, (161.)

3dly, Pronoun and substantive; mon orange, my orange.—Pronounce Mõn no-rân.

4thly, Pronoun and verb; on a, on est, we have, we are.—Pronounce õn na, õn nê, (164.)

5thly, Adverb and adjective; bien utile, very useful.—Pronounce Bi-in nu-t-il, (167.)

6thly, Preposition and substantive; en ami, as a friend.—Pronounce ân na-mi, (168.)

And all other cases where the two words are positively connected with each other.

57.—N not sounded.

When n is final in a word not essentially connected with the following, it is not articulated, as will be seen in the following cases:—

1st, Substantive and adjective; une intention excellente, an excellent intention.—Pronounce Unn in-tân-si-ôn or u niu-tân-si-ôn èk sè-lân-t.

2dly, Substantive and verb; ce pain est bon, this bread is good.—Pronounce Seu pin é bôn.

3dly, Substantive and adverb; il était mon voisin autrefois, he was formerly my neighbour.—Pronounce Il étâ môn voâ-zîn ô-treu-fôâ.

4thly, Substantive and preposition; j'ai une maison à Paris.—Pronounce Jé unn mê-zôn a Pa-ri.

5thly, Adjective and adverb: ce serait bon ailleurs, it would be good elsewhere.—Pronounce Seu s-rê bôn a-l-leur, with l liquid.

6thly, Adjective and preposition; il est enclin à la paresse, he is inclined to idleness.—Pronounce Il é tân-klîn a la pa-rêss.

Add to the above cases all others where the two words have no positive connexion with each other.

58.—On BIEN, well; and RIEN, nothing.

1st, The letter n in these two words is sounded before adjectives, verbs, adverbs, and prepositions; as, bien avantageux, very advantageous; bien écrire, to write well; rien inutilement, nothing uselessly; rien à faire, nothing to do.—Pronounce Bi-in na-vân-ta-jeû, bi-in né-cri-r, ri-in ni-nu-tî-l-mân, ri-in na-fê-r.

2dly, But if bien and rien are before an article or a conjunction, the n then is mute. Né dites rien au maître, say nothing to the master; il vécut bien et longtemps, he lives well and a long while. Pronounce Neu di-t ri-in ô mê-tr, il vé-ku bi-in é lôn-tân.

3dly, Whenever bien and rien are substantives, the n is invariably mute. Ce bien est à moi, this property is mine; un rien est souvent agréable, a trifle is often pleasant.—Pronounce Seu bi-in é ta moâ, ûn ri-in é sou-vân ta-gré-a-bi.

59.—The Suppressing of the Nasal Sound.

The nasal sound, in certain cases, as when n is connected with the following vowel, being recommended by some grammarians to be kept up, and by others to be suppressed, we would recommend the learner to suppress it, the French language being already too much loaded with nasal sounds. It therefore follows that the phrases in Rule 56, as un homme, bon écolier, mon orange, en a, en est, bien utile, en ami, and others of the same nature, have their nasal sound suppressed, and are sounded as u-homme, bo-nécolier, mo-norange, o-na, o-est, biê-nutile, a-na-mi, &c.

However, in the case of un ami, a male friend, and une amie, a female friend, we would recommend the learner to sound the nasal sound in the masculine un, for fear it might be taken for the feminine.—Pronounce, therefore, ûn na-mi, u na-mi.

SECTION VIII.

MUTE VOWELS.

60.—Suppression of a.

The vowel a is omitted in Sabne, Saone, a river; aoriste, aorist, (22); Août, August, (29); and in taon, ox-fly, (32.)

61.—Suppression of e.

The vowel e, when unaccented, is omitted, 1st, wherever it is preceded by g, and followed by another vowel, as il jugea, he judged, (15); il jugeait, he judged, (18); ils jugeaient, they judge, (19); flageolet, flageolet; geble, prison, (24); 2d, in all words having eau, as chapeau, hat, (24); 3d, in all third persons plural of verbs ending in ent, as ils avaient, they had, (19); 4th, in Caen, Caen, a town; Jean, John, (30); and à jeun, fasting, (33); lastly, in the middle, and at the end of all words, as chancelant, tottering; aimable, amiable. See SECTION XV. on E mute or guttural.

62.—Suppression of l.

The vowel i is omitted in oignon, onion; poignée, handful; poignet, wrist; poignard, poniard, (22.)

63.—Suppression of o.

The vowel o is omitted in Laon, Laon, a town; also in Paon, peacock; faon, fawn (30.)

64.—Suppression of u.

SECTION X.

IRREGULAR CONSONANTS.

Irregular consonants, like irregular vowels, are letters that are not articulated according to the manner in which they are either written or printed. This irregularity may exist when the letters are either single or combined, as it has already been seen in Sections IV. V. and VI., and as it will be seen in Sections XI. and XII. The most part of irregular consonants consists of letters, the pronunciation of which has been purposely altered, in consequence of the laws of Euphony, which ordains a sacrifice to be made on the part of the eye, in order to satisfy the ear. This being understood, we shall proceed to the development of irregular consonants

SECTION XI.

SINGLE IRREGULAR CONSONANTS.

65.—B.

B is never irregular, but it is liable to be double and mute. See the 12th Section for the former, and 13th for the latter.

66.—C articulated as S and G.

C is articulated as s in cité, city; ceux, those; forçat, criminal; leçon, lesson; reçu, received; wherever c is before e and i; or when ç is before a, o, u. C hard is always regular.—C is articulated as G in second, second; and derivatives; Czar, Czar. Also in the following words;—Secondaire, secondar, secondines, secondicier, secondement, &c. C is liable to be double and mute. See 12th Section for the former, and 13th for the latter.

131.—ZZ sounded as Z—z.

Lazzi, a laugh; no exceptions.

Pronounce Lâ-zi.

SECTION XIII.

FINAL MUTE CONSONANTS.

The Reader ought to know, that all French consonants are not always articulated in words wherein they are final; for example, although we say, un sac, a sack, with c articulated, it does not follow that we ought to say, du tabac, snuff, with c articulated. It is wrong to say, as many grammarians do, that c, f, l, r, final, are generally articulated; because the number of words in which these letters are mute is almost equal to those in which they are articulated.

Nothing remains, therefore, but to advise the Reader to attend particularly to the following Rules, in which the most part of words having a final mute consonant are noticed. Observe, that the following final consonants, although mute in common words, are generally sounded in proper names, as Jacob, Amalec, David, Azof, Harlem, Alep, Alger, Bajazet, Minos, Vénus, Suez, &c.

132.—B.

Do not articulate this letter in plomb, lead; surplomb, slopiness; d'aplomb, level; tire-plomb, glazier's vice, (105.)

Pronounce Plôn, sur-plôn, da-plôn, tir-plôn.

133.—C.

Reject this final consonant in tabac, snuff; estomac, stomach; marc, grounds; lacs, noose; banc, bench; blanc, white; flanc, flank; franc, frank; clerc, clerk; échecs, chess; cric, jack; porc, hog; broc, pitcher; instinct, instinct; jonc, rush; tronc, trunk; je vaincs, I conquer; tu vaincs, thou conquerest; il vainc, he conquers; also in arc-boutant, buttress; bec-jaune, fool; bec-d'âne, ignorant. But C is sounded in croc-en-jambe, trip between; clerc à maître, clerk and master; arc-en-ciel, rainbow; porc-épic, porcupine. CH in almanac, almanac, are both mute. (109.)

Pronounce Ta-ba, ès-to-ma, mar, lâ, bân.

blān, frān, flān, klēr, é-shē, cri, por, bro, Ins-tin, jōn, trōn, jeu vin, tu vin, il vin, al-ma-na, ar-bou-tān, bé-jōn, bé-dān, kro-kān-jān, kler-ka-mē-tr, ar-kāu-siel, por-ké-pik.

134.—D.

Regard this letter as silent in laid, ugly; froid, cold; nid, nest; chaud, warm; border; sourd, deaf; grand, great; second, second; je vends, I sell; il vend, he sells; in every other common word, and in all French proper names, as Arnauld; for it is only in sud, south, and in éphod, ephod, where d is articulated. (67.) (100.) (109.) (119.)

Pronounce Lá, fro-á, ní, shá, bor, sour, grān, sen-gōn, jeu vān, il vān, ar-nô, sud, da-vid, é-fod.

135.—F.

Articulate not the final f in clef, key; étouf, tennis ball; cerf, stag; boeufs, oxen; œufs, eggs; nerfs, nerves; œuf frais, fresh egg; œuf dur, hard egg; boeuf salé, salt-beef; œuf-volant, kite; chef-d'œuvre, masterpiece. But f is articulated in vis désir, vis amour, soif brûlante, and other words not mentioned here. (68.)

Pronounce Klé, é-tou, sôr, beuf, œf, nêr, œf-frô, eu-dur, beu-sa-lé, sêr-vo-lān, shé-deu-vr, víf dé-zir, ví-fa-mour, so-af brú-lān-t.

136.—G.

Take care not to sound g in rang, rank; sang, blood; étang, pond; hareng, herring; vingt, signature; poing, fist; faubourg, suburb; vingt, twenty; doigt, finger; in legs, legacy; and also in proper names, as Edimbourg, (69.) (99.) (119.)

Pronounce Kān, é-tān, ha-rān, sin, poln, fô-bour, vin, do-á, lê, é-din-bour.

137.—H.

Let h be mute in the interjections ah! ah! eh! eh! oh! oh! also in loch, lag; and in the following proper names—Munich, Utrecht, Élisabeth, and in all other proper names, (88.) (93.) (129.)

Pronounce A, é, ô, lok, mu-nik, u-trêk, è-li-za-bêt.

138.—K.

Articulate not k in Dantsick, nor in other towns ending in ck, (89.) (120.)

Pronounce Dānt-zic.

139.—L.

Pronounce the following words without articulating the l in baril, barrel; chemil, dog-kennel; coutil, tick; fil, son; fusil, gun; frassil, cinders; gril, gridiron; gentil, gentle; navbril, navel; outil, tool; sourcil, eyebrow; pouls, pulse; souf, tipay; and aulx, garlics, (116.) See il or ill liquid in the next Section.

Pronounce Barl, sh-ni, fi, kou-ti, fô-si, frô-zí, grí, jān-tí, nōn-bri, ou-tí, sour-sí, pou, souf, ô.

140.—MN.

Be extremely careful not to sound, in any manner whatever, any of these two letters when they are final, for fear of destroying the nasal sound, except in those places mentioned in Section XVI. on the connexion of words; and in the following words, ilem, idem; hem, hey; musdum, museum; forum, forum; palladium, palladium; rum, rum; par intérim, in the meantime; and every word ending in um;

amen, amen; eden, eden; hymen, hymen; solen, solen; abdomen, abdomen; cyclamen, cyclamen; dictamen, dictamen; gramen, dog's-grass; lichen, lichen; pollen, pollen; gluten, gluten; and all others ending in m or n, derived from the Greek or Latin language. (74.) (75.) See Nasal Sounds, Final Remarks, Section XX.

Pronounce I-tēm, hēm, mu-zé-om, fo-rom, pa-la-di-om, rom, a-mèn, é-dèn, l-mèn, so-lèn, ab-dô-mèn, si-klā-mèn, dik-tā-mèn, grā-mèn, li-kèn, po-lèn, glu-ten.

141.—P.

Do not articulate this letter in camp, camp; champ, field; coup, blow; loup, wolf; cep, branch; corps, body; exempt, exempt; sept, seven; prompt, quick; galop, gallop; sirup, syrup; and in trop, when final. (105.) (107.) (114.)

Pronounce Kān, shān, kou, lou, sà, kor, ég-zān, sêt, prōn, ga-lo, si-ro, tro.

142.—Q.

Avoid pronouncing q in cing before a consonant, as cing livres, five books; coq d'Inde, Turkey-cock, &c.; but sound it everywhere else.

Pronounce Cin li-vr, ko-din-d.

143.—R.

Observe that the letter r is silent in an immense number of words ending in ger, cher, iller, as danger, danger; cocher, coachman; métier, trade; oreiller, pillow-case; and in all verbs of the first termination ending in er. It is mute also in monsieur, sir; messieurs, gentlemen; but it must be articulated in the following words, amer, bitter; belvédère, belvedere; cancer, cancer; cuiller, spoon; cher, dear; enfer, hell; éther, ether; fer, iron; fier, proud; frater, barber; hier, yesterday; hiver, winter; lucifer, lucifer; mâchefers, iron dross; mer, sea; statouder, stadtholder. Also in alfes, ensign-bearer; gaster, stomach; magister, master; messer, master; outré-mer, beyond sea; pater, father; and in those ending in ar, ir, or, ur. air, our, eur.

Pronounce Dān-já, ko-shé, mó-tiá, oré-ll-lé. (114.) mo-siéú, mé-siéú, a-mêr, kân-sêr, kull-lêr. (114.) shêr, ān-fer, fêr, l-êr, l-vêr, lu-si-fer, ma-sh-fer, mêr, sta-tou-dêr, al-fêr, gast-têr, ma-jis-têr, mé-sêr, ou-tre-mêr, pa-têr.

144.—S.

Let no s be heard in the plural of substantives, or at the end of any word whatever, except in those places mentioned in Section XVI. on the connexion of words, and in the following words, as atlas, atlas; hélas! alas! laps, lapse; vasistas, vasistas; opras, opras, a title; égilops, œgilops, (an ulcer), florès, flourish; stras, glass paste; ad patres, dead; ad honores, without profit; princeps, first; alode, aloes; kermès, kermès; bis, encore, or twice; ibis, ibis; gratis, gratis; Parisis, of Paris; jadis, formerly; lis, lily; lapis, lapis; locatis, hired horse or coach; sia, situated; unguis, unguis, (a bone); vis, screw; éthiops, œthiops, (a mineral); pathos, pathos; agnus, agnus; bibus, of no value; bloccus, blockade; chorus, chorus; hiatus, gap; négus, negus; orémus, oremus; phébus, phœbus; prospéctus, prospectus; rébus, rebus; sinus, sine; en sus, over the bargain; ours, bear; mordicus, with obstinacy, (100.) (121.)

Pronounce At-las, hé-las, va-sis-tas, o-pras, é-ji-lops, flo-rès, stras, ad pa-très, prin-sèps, a-loès, kèr-mès, bis, gra-tis, jà-dis, lis, la-pis, lo-ka-tis, sis, vis, pa-ri-sis, é-tiops, pa-tos, ag-nus, bi-bus, blo-kus, ko-rus, hi-a-tus, né-gus, fé-bus, o-ré-mus, pros-pèk-tus, ré-bus, si-nus, ân-sus, ours, mor-di-kus.

145.—T.

Do not articulate this consonant at the end of any word whatever, except in those places mentioned in Section XVI. on the connexion of words, and in the following words, fat, coxcomb; cobalt, cobalt; spalt, spalt (a stone), mat, unpolished; opiat, opiate (a medicine); exact, exact; rapt, rape; yacht, yacht; transeat, transeat (permit to pass); licet, permission; est, east; ouest, west; sept, seven; lest, ballast; zest, fiddlestick; direct, direct; infect, infect; tacet, secret; et cetera, and so on; accessit, near it; granit, granite; huit, eight; déficit, deficiency; subit, sudden; prétérît, preterite; strict, strict; tacit, silent; transit, permit; le Christ, Christ; zénith, zenith; dot, dowry; ut, c in music; occiput, occiput (the back of the head); brut, rough; lut, luting; luth, lute; chut, hush; indult, indult (a favour); and in bismuth, bismuth, (100.) (107.) (109.) (110.) (111.) (119.)

Pronounce Fat, ko-balt, spalt, mat, o-pi-at, ég-zact, ra-pt, i-at, tran-zé-at, li-sèt, ta-sèt, ést, ou-íst, sèt, zèst, in-fèct, èt sé-té-ra, gra-nit, u-it, pré-té-rit, strict, ta-sit, trān-zit, leu krist, zé-nit, dot, ut, ok-si-put, brut, lut, lut, shut, indult, bismut.

146.—X.

Do not articulate this letter in faix. burden; paix, peace; crucifix, cross; perdriz, partridge; prix, price; chaux, lime; fauz, false; nor in the plural of the article or of the substantive, or other words, except in those places mentioned in Section XVI. on the connexion of words, and in climax, climax; index, index; phénix, phoenix; and sphinx, sphinx. (100.)

Pronounce Fê, pê, kru-si-fi, pêr-dri, pri, shô, fô, kli-maks, in-dèks, fé-niks, sfinks.

147.—Z.

Never sound this letter when final, as in nez, nose; rez-de-chaussée, floor on a level with the street; except where it is mentioned in Section XVI. on the connexion of words, and in a few proper names; as, Suez, Alvarez, &c.

Pronounce Né, ré-d-shô-sé, su-èz, al-va-rèz.

Although the articulating or not of the above final consonants does not affect the language grammatically speaking, it is nevertheless of the utmost importance, when reading, to refer often to the above rules, so as to make oneself master of them: for the articulation of a final consonant that ought to be mute is sufficient to distinguish a foreigner from a native of France. So much for the necessity of knowing all these rules by heart.

SECTION XIV.

ON LIQUID SOUNDS.

Next to the nasal sound, the liquid sounds of l or gn are the most difficult to get at in the French language. All efforts, even with physical demonstration, are nearly in vain, in endeavouring to explain the organic powers of these liquid sounds. Suffice it to say, that they are sweet sounds, and by no means to be neglected while speaking French, as many persons do. Of this we shall speak hereafter.

148.—L AND LL LIQUID.

L single liquid.

1st, L single is invariably liquid in all words ending in aïl, euil, and ouïl, as sérial, seraglio; conseil, council; deuil, mourning; fenouil, fennel.

2dly, It is also liquid in Avril, April; babil, prating; persil, parsley; grésil, small hail; mil, millet; fenil, hay loft. Let l single final be sounded hard everywhere else. See (52.) Section VI. on Diphthongs, and (73.) Section XI. on single irregular consonants.

Pronounce with the liquid sound Sé-ra-ïl, cōn-sè-ïl, deu-ïl, feu-nou-ïl, av-ri-ïl, ba-bi-ïl, pèr-si-ïl, gré-zi-ïl, mi-ïl, feu-ni-ïl, fi-ïl.

149.—LL double liquid.

1st, LL double are invariably liquid in all words having aïlle, eïlle, euïlle, and ouïlle, medial or final, as canaille, rabble; treille, arbour; feuïlle, leaf; rouïlle, rust.

2dly, They are also liquid in all words having ille, as fille, girl; but with some exceptions, where they are sounded hard. 1. In all proper names, as Achille. 2. In names of towns as Lille. 3. In two adjectives, as, mille. thousand; tranquille, tranquil. 4. In a few substantives, as calville, a sort of apple; vaudeville, song; mille, mile; pupille, pupil; ville, town; sibylle, sibyl. Also in the following words—aquatille, arbalétrille, logistille, sille, smille, squille, millénaire, millimètre, milligramme, osciller, scintiller. 5. In all words wherein two ll are sounded, as illégal. See (101.) Section XII. on combined irregular consonants.

Pronounce with the liquid sound of ll, Ca-na-ïll, trè-ïll, feu-ïll, rou-ïll, fi-ïll, and with the hard sound of l, a-shi-l, li-l, trān-ki-l, kal-vi-l, vô-d-vi-l, mi-l, pu-pi-l, vi-l, si-bi-l, a-kou-a-ti-l, ar-ba-lé-tri-l, lo-jis-ti-l, si-l, smi-l, skou-i-l, mille-nèr, mil-li-mè-tr, mil-li-gra-m, o-sil-lé, sint-il-lé, il-lé-gal.

150.—As for signs representing the liquid sounds of either l or gn, it must be acknowledged that nothing has been found adequate, so that our lexicographers are obliged to signify the identity of the liquid sound by the word liquid, and no other way; yet the Spaniards have invented one, by putting a little crooked bar over n when gn have the liquid sound,—an immense advantage.

151.—GN liquid.

Let gn be sounded liquid in régner, to reign; saigner, to bleed; agneau, lamb; compagnon, friend; magnifique, magnificent; magnésie, magnesia; and in all other words having gn, except in the following cases, where g and n are both distinctly sounded: 1st, In all words beginning with gn, as gnomon, gnomon. 2dly, In all words having stag, steg, stig, as stagnation, stagnation; impregnation, impregnation; and derivatives. Also in the following words, as agnat, cognat, magnats, progné, régnicols, diagnostique, gnomonique. See (96.) Section XII. on irregular combined consonants.

Pronounce with the liquid sound of gn, Kön-pa-gniön, ma-gni-fik, ma-gnié-tik, but with the hard sound, guo-mon, stag-nä-siön, ig-ni-siön, l-néks-pug-na-bl, in-prég-nä-siön, ag-na, kog-na, mag-nä, prog-né, rég-ni-eöl, di-ag-nos-ti-k, g-no-mo-ni-k, with gn hard.

SECTION XV.

E MUTE OR GUTTURAL.

Although the French Grammarians think it superfluous, in their own country, to guide the learner in the pronunciation of certain vowels and consonants, it is nevertheless the duty of those who are in foreign countries to relieve the learner from the embarrassment he must feel in attempting a pronunciation with which he is unacquainted. Accordingly, a few rules shall be laid down, which may not prove unacceptable.

Of the Pronunciation of the two unaccented e's, called e mute and e guttural.

In conversation, as well as in familiar reading, the final unaccented e in dissyllables, as juge, judge; in trisyllables, as honnête, honest; and in polysyllables, as charitable, charitable, is invariably mute, and presents no difficulty whatever. But when the unaccented e is final, as in the monosyllables le, the; je, I; me, me; te, thee; se, himself; le, it; que, which; ce, that; de, of; ne, not; and medial in polysyllables, as in judgement, honnêtement, and volontairement, judgment, honestly, and voluntarily; its pronunciation offers many anomalies, owing to its position; for it happens that e is pronounced sometimes with the guttural sound in a word, wherein the same e is mute at other times.

152.—Theory of the Unaccented E, whether Guttural or Mute.

Phrases exhibiting the unaccented e, whether guttural or mute, from one e to the number of eight.

|--|--------------------------------------|
| 1 Je donne, | I give. |
| 2 Je le donne, | I give it. |
| 3 Je te le donne, | I give it to thee. |
| 4 Je ne te le donne pas, | I do not give it to thee. |
| 5 Que je ne te le donne pas, | That I do not give it to thee. |
| 6 *De ce que je ne te le donne pas, | That I do not give it. |
| 7 *De ce que je ne te le donne pas, | That I do not give it to thee. |
| 8 *De ce que je ne te le redonne pas, | That I do not give it again to thee. |

153.—Exemplifying one Medial Unaccented e.

The medial unaccented e is invariably mute in all parts of speech, whether dissyllables, trisyllables, or polysyllables.

| Parts of Speech. | Examples. | Pronunciation. |
|------------------|-------------|----------------|
| Substantive. | Jugement, | judgment. |
| Adjective. | Chancelant, | wavering. |
| Pronoun. | à cela, | to that. |
| Verb. | Vous serez, | you will be. |
| Do. | Soutenir, | to maintain. |
| Adverb. | Sagement, | wisely. |
| Preposition. | Au delà, | beyond. |
| Conjunction. | Parce que, | because. |
| | | ju-j-män. |
| | | shän-s-län. |
| | | a s-la. |
| | | vou-s-ré. |
| | | sou-t-nir. |
| | | sa-j-män. |
| | | ö-d-la. |
| | | par-s-keu. |

154.—Exemplifying one Final Unaccented e.

The final unaccented e is mute in the article le, the; the personal pronouns, je, me, te, se, le; the demonstrative and relative pronouns, ce, que; the preposition de; the conjunction que; and the negation ne.

| | | |
|-----------------------|----------------------|--------------------|
| Voici le pain, | Here is the bread. | voä-sil-pän. |
| Je vendais, | I did sell. | j-vän-dé. |
| Tu ne vendais pas, | Thou didst not sell. | tu-n-vän-dé-pä. |
| Nous ne vendions pas, | We did not sell. | noü-n-vän-dé-n-pä. |
| Vous ne vendiez pas, | You did not sell. | voü-n-vän-dé-pä. |
| Donnez-le-moi, | Give it to me. | do-né-l-moa. |
| Ce livre est vendu, | This book is sold. | s-li-vr-é-vän-du. |

* Il est surpris, he is surprised, is understood to precede the four last lines, in both languages

Exceptions.

When e unaccented final is between two consonants having the same power; as de donner, le lui offrir, me mortifier, se satisfaire, te trahir, &c., instead of being mute, according to the above Rule, it must be sounded.

| | | |
|------------------------|----------------------------|-------------------------|
| Il convint de donner, | He consented to give. | Il-côn-vîn-deu-do-né. |
| Il le lui offriira, | He will offer it to him. | Il-leu-lui-o-fri-ra. |
| Il me mortifia, | He vexed me. | Il-meu-mor-ti-fia. |
| Il veut se satisfaire, | He wishes to be satisfied. | Il-veu-seu-sa-tis-fê-r. |
| Il te trahira, | He will betray thee. | Il-teu-tra-i-ra. |

The same exceptions hold good when e is preceded by a final articulated consonant; as l'air de Paris, the air of Paris; il tenait, he held; or when preceded by e final, as elle venait, she came; un verre de vin, a glass of wine. Pronounce lêr deu Pa-ri, il teu-né, èl-veu-né, ûn vèr deu vîn.

155.—Exemplifying two Final Unaccented e's.

When the medial or final unaccented e is found in two successive monosyllables, the first is pronounced with the guttural sound, and the second is mute, so as to avoid either two successive guttural sounds, or two mute e's.

| | | |
|----------------------|----------------------------|----------------------|
| Je me vendais, | I did sell myself. | Jeum-vân-dê. |
| Je te vendais, | I did sell thee. | Jeut-vân-dê. |
| Je le vendais, | I did sell him. | Jeul-vân-dê. |
| Me le vendait-il? | Did he sell it to me? | Meul-vân-dê-til? |
| Te le vendait-il? | Did he sell it to thee? | Teul-vân-dê-til? |
| Se le vendait-il? | Did he sell it to himself? | Seul-vân-dê-til? |
| Je ne vendais pas, | I did not sell. | Jeun-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Le prix de ce livre, | The price of that book. | Leu-pri-deu-s-li-vr. |

Exceptions.

The unaccented e in the following conjunctions, à ce que, as; parce que, because; à mesure que, in proportion as; is pronounced contrary to the above Rule. Instead of sounding the first, and suppressing the last—

| | | |
|---------------|----------------|--------------|
| a-ceu-q, | sound only the | a-s-geu. |
| par-ceu-q, | last and say, | par-s-geu. |
| a-m-zu-reu-q, | | a-m-zur-geu. |

156.—Exemplifying three unaccented e's.

When the unaccented e is found in three successive syllables, it is the custom to pronounce the e of the middle syllable with the guttural sound, and the first and last e are considered as mute; it follows then, that out of three unaccented e's, only one is sounded. Nevertheless, some prefer to sound the first and last, and to suppress the middle e.

| | | |
|---------------------------|--------------------------|-----------------------|
| Je me le vendais, | I did sell it to myself. | J-meu-l-vân-dê. |
| Je te le vendais, | I did sell it to thee. | J-teu-l-vân-dê. |
| Je ne me vendais pas, | I did not sell myself. | J-neu-m-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Je ne te vendais pas, | I did not sell thee. | J-neu-t-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Je ne le vendais pas, | I did not sell it. | J-neu-l-vân-dê-pâ. |
| C'est ce que je vendais, | It is what I did sell. | Sê-s-geu-j-vân-dê. |
| Il dit que je le vendais, | He says I did sell it. | Il-di-q-jeu-l-vân-dê. |

But there is another way which is more elegant; it consists of sounding the first and last e and omitting the middle one; as, Jeu-m-leu-vân-dê, jeu-t-leu-vân-dê, jeu-n-meu-vân-dê-pâ, jeu-n-teu-vân-dê-pâ, jeu-n-leu-vân-dê-pâ, and so on.

Exceptions.

The unaccented e in the following phrases, viz. que ne me vendait-il? why did he not sell me? que ne te vendait-il? why did he not sell to thee? que ne se vendait-il? why did he not sell to himself? is pronounced contrary to the above rule. Instead of sounding the middle e only, and saying—

| | | |
|---------------------|--------------|-----------------------|
| q-neu-m-vân-dê-til, | suppress the | qeu-n-meu-vân-dê-til, |
| q-neu-t-vân-dê-til, | middle e, | qeu-n-teu-vân-dê-til. |
| q-neu-s-vân-dê-til, | and say, | qeu-n-seu-vân-dê-til. |

157.—Exemplifying four Unaccented e's.

When the unaccented e is met with in four successive syllables, the first and the third e have the guttural sound, and the second and fourth are mute.

| | | |
|------------------------------------|------------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Je ne me le vendais pas, | I did not sell it to myself. | Jeu-n-meu-l-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Je ne te le vendais pas, | I did not sell it to thee. | Jeu-n-teu-l-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Il dit que je ne le vendais pas, | He says I did not sell it. | Il-di-que-j-neul-vân-dê-pâ. |
| Il dit que je me le vendais, | He says I did sell it to myself. | Il-di-que-j-meu-l-vân-dê. |
| Il dit que je te le vendais, | He says I did sell it to thee. | Il-di-que-j-teu-l-vân-dê. |
| Je n'ai plus de ce que je vendais, | I have no more of what I did sell. | J-nô-plû-deu-s-geu-j-vân-dê. |

153.—Exemplifying five, six, seven, and eight Unaccented e's.

When the unaccented e is found in five, six, seven, or eight successive syllables, its pronunciation cannot be accurately described; for sometimes, among five successive syllables which have the e unaccented, it happens that three or two only have the guttural sound; and so on with other phrases, where the number of these syllables is still more numerous. The following examples, however, may be taken as standards for phrases of the same complicated nature.

Examples of five Unaccented e's.

Il est surpris de ce que je le vendais. | He is surprised that I did sell it.

Pronounce, Il-è-sur-pri-deu-s-geu-feu-l-èdn-dè.

Examples of six e's.

Il est surpris de ce que je ne le vendais pas, | He is surprised that I did not sell it.

Pronounce, Il-è-sur-pri-deu-s-geu-fneu-l-èdn-dè-pà.

Examples of seven Unaccented e's.

Il est surpris de ce que je ne te le vendais pas, | He is surprised that I did not sell it to thee

Pronounce, Il-è-sur-pri-deu-s-geu-fneu-teu-l-èdn-dè-pà.

Examples of eight Unaccented e's.

Il est surpris de ce que je ne te le demandais pas, | He is surprised that I did not ask thee about it.

Pronounce, Il-è-sur-pri-deu-s-geu-j-neu-m-leu-d-mân-dè-pà.

(159).—Recapitulatory Example of Pronunciation of the guttural and e mute.

Je vous le dis encore, quand est-ce que vous me | I say to you again, when will you pay me for paieriez le canif que je vous ai vendu? | the penknife I sold you?

Pronounce, J-vou-l-dis-ân-cor-qân-ils-geu-vou-m-pè-ré-l-ca-nif-geu-f-vous-è-èdn-du?

From this last example it appears that, out of twenty-four syllables of which it is composed, only sixteen are heard in conversation or familiar reading.

Final Observation on E mute.

Thus it has been shown where the unaccented e ought to be mute, and where it ought to have the guttural sound. In the observance of the above rules is laid the basis of that fluency of speech which is so much required in conversation. It is to the same observance that the rapidity of delivery ascribed to the French nation is partly owing.

In conclusion, we have only to say, that the examples containing six, seven, and eight e's are merely for form's sake; yet he would greatly err who would suppose, that sentences containing five e's are not to be found in French composition. In the Bible, for instance, there is a sentence in which five unaccented e's follow each other. It is written in this way: demeure là, jusqu'à ce que je te le dise, remain there until I let you know. So says the angel to Joseph, on advising him to flee into Egypt; and the pronunciation stands thus, jus-ka-s-keu-f-teu-l-dè-s. See (3.) Section IV. on single irregular vowels and (61.) Section VIII. on mute vowels.

SECTION XVI.

ON THE CONNEXION OF WORDS.

When a word in French is necessarily followed by another, the final consonant of the first word is usually joined to the initial vowel of the last, as, je vous aime, I love you; read, jeu-vou-è-m. As the verb here must necessarily be preceded by the pronoun objective, the final consonant then must be joined to the initial vowel. Again, un grand homme, a great man; read ân-grân-to-m; because, in this case, the substantive is qualified, or essentially affected by the adjective. When, on the contrary, an adjective follows a substantive, the union does not take place; for this reason, that a substantive can never qualify an adjective, whereas adjectives qualify substantives. Several examples of all the parts of speech will now be given, so as to render the observations on the connexion or junction of words or 'etters plain and intelligible.

The small arch which is made use of between the two words demonstrates the junction.

SECTION XVII.

PROSODY.

By Prosody is understood the proper manner of pronouncing the syllables of words. French prosody is divided into two parts, viz. quantity and accent.

171.—Quantity of French Syllables.

By quantity is meant an emission of voice more or less long. The words malle, malle, male, trunk; matin, matin, bull-dog, morning; tâche, tâche, task, spot; mûr, mur, ripe, wall; faiz, fait, burden, fact; voix, voit (il), voice, he sees, have different quantities; in prosody the former is long, and is accented thus, mâle; and the latter is short, thus malle. It being impossible here to give particular rules concerning the quantity of every word, we shall lay down such general ones as will be found nearly to answer the same purpose.

172.—Rules on Quantity.

1st. All syllables having the circumflex accent are long; as Mât, mast; île, island; apôtre, apostle, &c.

2d. All syllables having the nasal sound are long; as Grând, great; crâinte, fear; tômbér, to fall, &c. It is so settled since d'Olivet's Treatise.

3d. All syllables having the liquid sound of the l are long; as Soleil, sun; rouille, rust; feuille, leaf, &c. It is so agreed since d'Olivet's Treatise.

4th. All syllables having a final mute, are long; épée, sword; vie, life; rue, street; je jôûe, I play; f'envoie, I send, &c.

5th. All syllables ending with s, x, or s mute, are long; j'avais, I had; repôs, rest; paix, peace; ris, rice; nôz, nose, &c.

6th. All syllables having se medial or final sounded as se, are long; église, church; épouse, wife; amusement, amusement, &c.

7th. All syllables in re are long; sâbre, sabre; escâdre, squadron; chaîre, pulpit; caddvre, corpse; père, father; hydre, hydra; victoire, victory, &c.

8th. All syllables having two r's indivisible are long; barre, bar; tonnêrre, thunder; arrêt, decree, &c.

9th. All syllables having two s's indivisible in verbs, are long. Que j'aimâsse, I might love; que je confessé, I might confess; que je fusse, I might do; que j'endôsse, I might put on my back; que je fusse, I might be.

10th. All syllables in the plural are long; sacs, sacks; pôts, pots; sels, salts; rois, kings ils avoient, they had, &c.

11th. All syllables ending with any consonant but s or s mute are short; cheval, horse; fusil, musket; drôp, cloth; habit, coat; dûc, duke; sêl, salt; mêr, sea, &c.

12th. All syllables ending with a final vowel are short; jê, I; mê, me; là, the; opéra, opera; parlé, spoken; fini, ended; reçu, received, &c.

13th. All syllables forming the first of a diphthong are short; piéd, foot; foiét, whip; il confia, he trusted; il tua, he killed.

14th. All syllables followed by two consonants of the same kind, except r and s, are short; affaire, affair; aller, to go; épigramme, epigram; dônnér, to give; apprendre, to learn; mêttre, to put; innocent, innocent; Aûtte, hut, &c.

173.—Accent on French Syllables.

This word has many meanings; first, it signifies the close, open, and circumflex accent, called in French accent grammatical; secondly, it means the accent belonging to a country, as, Normandy, Gascony, or any other province; but which ought to be laid aside for that of Paris, the only one countenanced in France; thirdly, it applies to the stress given on words in a sentence, called in English emphasis, and in French accent oratoire; lastly, it means a stress on a syllable called in English simply accent, and in French accent tonique.

174.—Rules on Syllabication.

1st. Syllables, as mât, mast; bas, low, &c.

are called long; as, pâtre, herdsman; base, basis, &c., very long; as, peur, fear; piéd, foot, &c., short; and as je, I; me, me; ne, not, &c., very short.

2d, Words of one syllable not ending in e mute, as mat, ill; mot, word, &c., are called masculine monosyllables.

3d, Words of two syllables ending in e mute, as table, table; miènnè, mine; ruse, trick, &c., are called feminine monosyllables.

4th, Words composed of two, three, or more syllables not ending in e mute, as palais, palace; mouvement, movement; insensibilité, insensibility, &c., are called masculine dissyllables, trisyllables, and polysyllables.

5th, Words composed of three, four, or more syllables ending in e mute, as église, church; difficile, difficult; indifférence, coolness, &c., are called feminine dissyllables, trisyllables, and polysyllables.

SECTION XVIII.

ON THE PARSING OF SOUNDS.

The Parsing of the Sounds being as essential to pronunciation as the parsing of the parts of speech is to the construction in grammar, it becomes an imperative duty to be acquainted with that species of knowledge; for on its successful application depends that exactitude required in uttering the sounds of the French language. Let the learner be convinced that the want of parsing the sounds properly is a positive bar to either reading or talking French in a correct manner.

The learner being supposed to be tolerably acquainted with the foregoing chapters on the French pronunciation, must, in order to parse, endeavour to remember the terms which have frequently been made use of while explaining the theory and practice of the French sounds. These terms are found at the head of each Chapter or Section. But that the learner may not be perplexed in that peculiar new duty, we shall give the parsing definition of vowels and consonants, as a guide.

175.—Parsing of Vowels.

1st, Simple regular vowels are those that are pronounced as they are written, as a in la, the: and o in mot, word.

2dly, Simple irregular vowels are those that are not pronounced as written, as a in las, fatigued, which is sounded as lá; and e in femme, woman, sounded as fa-m.

3dly, Combined regular vowels are those that are pronounced as written: as, ou, eu, in mou, soft; feu, fire.

4thly, Combined irregular vowels are those that are not pronounced as written; as, eau, ai, ui, &c., in beau, fine; lait, milk; qui, who, &c., which are sounded as if they were written bô, lè, and qi.

5thly, Regular nasal vowels are those whose sounds correspond with the writing, as a in champ, field; o in bon, good.

6thly, Irregular nasal vowels are those that differ from the writing, such as e in vent, wind, which is sounded as vân; ain in bain, bath, sounded as bin.

7thly, All diphthongs experience the same degree of application as the above vowels: let those whose sound corresponds with the writing be called regular; and those that are the reverse, irregular.

176.—Parsing of Consonants.

1st, Regular simple consonants, are those that are articulated as they are written, as c in corde, cord; and t in temps, weather.

2dly, Irregular simple consonants are articulated differently from the writing; as c in second, second, which is pronounced as g; as t in patient, patient, sounded s hard, as pa-si-ân.

3dly, Regular combined consonants, are articulated according to their character; as ll in illustre, illustrious; gn in stagnant, stagnant; str and ct in structure, structure, &c.

4thly, Irregular combined consonants are just the reverse; as ch in chaos, chaos; and in cher, dear; pronounced first as k, then as sh; ph in philosophe, philosopher, as fil-lo-zo-f; rps in corps, body, sounded as kôr; ll and gn liquid, in fille, girl; and agneau, lamb, &c.

177.—Parsing of Mute Letters.

Lastly, The reader will remember that all vowels are liable to be mute, such as a in pain, bread; e in il parle, he speaks; ils parlent, they speak; i in poignée, handful; o in paon, peacock; u in qui, who, &c. Nor is he to forget that every consonant, except j and v, is liable to be mute, as b in plomb, lead; c in estomac, stomach; d in froid, cold; g in sang, blood; z in nez, nose, &c.

GENERAL RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN READING FRENCH.—
PAUSES.—INFLECTIONS.

In order to obtain a distinct accent, a flowing articulation, and a correct pronunciation, it is necessary to observe the following precepts:—

179.—Punctuation and Accents.

1. Read slow, as there are many defects attending fast reading, such as stammering, false spelling, sounds half formed, inaudible articulation, all tending to render the language unintelligible.
2. Stop not where there are neither pauses nor signs of punctuation, neither between the substantive and its qualifier, nor between the verb and its objective case.
3. Pay a scrupulous attention to the punctuation, and especially to commas, for the clearness of a sentence depends on them; let not the voice drop at each comma, but wait till the end of the period.
4. Do not fail to lay the emphasis on the proper syllable, and the inflection on the proper word, but at the same time avoid a singing pronunciation.
5. Observe particularly, and sound properly all French accents, and other orthographical signs that occur in reading, as the acute accent é, the slender open accent è, the broad open accent ê, the diæresis ï, and the œ dilla ç.

180.—Single and Combined Irregular Letters.

6. Exercise your memory with the single irregular vowels, as e unaccented in femme, &c., sounded as a; e unaccented in les, des, &c., sounded as è broad, and others equally irregular, (2.) (6.)
7. Have always present in the mind all the combined irregular vowels emitting pure sounds, and especially that of the slender è, represented by ai, ait, oi, oit, ei, eai, eoi, uai, uei, ay, oy; and that of the broad open ê, represented by es, est, ais, ois, aient, oient, eient, coient, uaient, uoient, and ès, (18.) (19.)
8. Recollect that the nasal sound in, is the primitive sound of ain, ain, ein, and em in en, (31.) (34.)
9. Take the English letter u as a standard of pronunciation for all French diphthongs, as to quantity, and remember that there are no improper diphthongs in French.
10. Render yourself familiar with the French irregular consonants, as t pronounced as a ç in patient, &c. (80.)
11. Remember the exact articulation of consonants, when combined, as ct in respect, re-spect; ps in corps, body; and others equally irregular, (91.) (121.)

181.—Quantity of Sound.

1. Lay a proper stress on all nasal sounds, as the organic formation of these sounds is long in its nature.
2. Do not forget to lengthen all vowels accented with the circumflex, as apôtre, apostle; île, island; tempête, tempest, &c.
3. Consider as long the final vowel of the plural of all French words that are declinable; as, môts, words.

4. Lengthen the penultimate vowel of all words ending in e mute; as, pensée, thought; vie, life; rue, street; joie, joy; joue, cheek, &c.
5. Lengthen all penultimate vowels followed by two r's, as bierre, bar; tonnerre, thunder; or two s's, as classe, class; vieillesse, old age, &c.
6. Lengthen a penultimate vowel followed by se or ce, as église, church; rose, rose; muse, muse; gaze, gauze; seize, sixteenth, dozse, twelve, &c.
7. Lengthen all medial vowels followed by s or z, as oiseau, bird; jaser, to prattle; gazette, gazette, &c.
8. Lengthen all vowels followed by an s, x, or z final mute, as bas, low; os, bone; jus, juice; prix, price; paix, peace; nez, nose, &c.
9. Look upon every syllable, ending with any consonant but z, x, s, as short; say, therefore, câni/, pen-knife; chêval, horse; bonnet, cap, &c. See Prosody, Section XVII.

182.—Pauses.

1. Pause before a subject or nominative, whether single or followed by others; as, César et Pompée | étaient romains, Cesar and Pompey | were Romans.
2. Pause after any word or words qualifying the subject of the phrase; as L'ambition de César | fut la cause de sa ruine, Cesar's ambition | was the cause of his ruin.
3. Pause before nouns in opposition to each other; as, Les uns | abhorraient les vices de César, les autres | craignaient les vertus de Pompée. Some | abhorred Cesar's vices, others | dreaded Pompey's virtues.
4. Pause before qui when subjective, and before que, dont, or other objective relative pronouns; as, C'est César | qui gagna la bataille de Pharsale | dont Lucain parle dans son poëme, It is Cesar | who gained the battle of Pharsalia | mentioned by Lucan in his poem.
5. Pause before and after a phrase which separates a subjective word from its verb; as, La colonne de Pompée | que vous voyez, est d'un beau granit rouge, Pompey's pillar | which you see, is of a fine red granite.
6. Pause before all prepositions and conjunctions; as, Pompée prit les armes | par patriotisme, mais César prit les siennes | par ambition, Pompey took up arms | through patriotism, but Cesar took them up | through ambition.
7. The pauses called Grammatical, as comma, semicolon, colon, period, interrogative and exclamationary points, besides the dash, are rendered practical by counting one for the comma; one, two, for the semicolon; one, two, three, for the colon; one, two, three, four, for the period and other signs.

183.—Inflections.

1. The falling inflection takes place at the period; as, Les maîtres aiment les écoliers attentifs, Masters love attentive pupils.

2. The falling inflection takes place at the exclamatory sign; as, Puissent les écoliers aimer leurs maîtres! May the pupils be fond of their masters!

3. The rising inflection takes place on the last member but one of a phrase; as, Les écoliers doivent être non-seulement obéissants, mais même respectueux envers leurs maîtres. Pupils ought to be not only obedient, but even respectful towards their masters.

4. The rising inflection takes place after a question which can be answered by either yes or no; as, Les écoliers aiment-ils les bons maîtres? Are pupils fond of kind masters?

5. The falling inflection takes place at the end of a question that cannot be answered by either yes or no; as, Quels sont les maîtres qui n'éprouvent point de contradictions? Who are those masters who experience no vexations?

6. The rising inflection takes place at the end of words brought in opposition to each other; as, Les maîtres récompensent l'industrie, et punissent la paresse. Masters reward diligence, and punish idleness.

7. The rising inflection takes place at the end of a question which can be answered by yes or no; as, Les vertus ne sont-elles pas préférables aux talents? Are not virtues preferable to talents?

184.—Poetical Utterance.

1. Breathe and pause at the cæsura, whether it be a line of ten or twelve syllables, and at the end of all lines of any measure.

2. Pronounce the two words intended to rhyme together, both with the same quantity and quality of the sound.

3. Let s and t, although preceded by e or en mute, be articulated and joined to the following word when it begins with a vowel; as, Ils aiment à voyager, they are fond of travelling; fidèles amies, constant friends; amantes infortunées, unfortunate lovers. Pronounce Il zè-m ta voa-ia-jé; fi-dè-l za-mi; a-mân-t zin-fôr-tu-né.

SECTION XX.

FINAL REMARKS

ON THE SOUNDS OF THE FRENCH LANGUAGE.

185.—A.

Hiatus, or gaping, being a vice of pronunciation, it is well to avoid such sentences as il va à Alep, he goes to Aleppo; otherwise it would create cacophony, which, like cacology in composition, ought to be guarded against. The same law applies to e, i, o, u.

186.—B.

The habit, among some, of articulating b as p, in obtenir, to obtain; obtempérer, to obey, and derivatives, is exceedingly blamable, and ought to be discontinued.

187.—C.

The articulation of c as g, in secret, and derivatives, and also as sh in vermicelle, vermicelli, and violoncelle, bass-violin, partakes of affectation, and should be abandoned.

188.—D.

Although d final is articulated as t before initial vowels, as, un grand arbre, a large tree; it resumes its proper sound, when followed by e mute, as, une grande œuvre, a great work.

189.—E.

E Mute or Sounded.

To the Rules, Section XV. showing how to pronounce or suppress the vowel e, and where it should be guttural or mute, we shall add a few important observations, which may be looked upon as so many maxims by the reader.

1st, Never sound or suppress two unaccented e's following each other, as, Il me le donne, he gives it to me; il se levait, he rose; devenir, to come back. 2d, Do not suppress the unaccented e, in the article le, when it begins a sentence or a sense, as, Quand on a tort, le meilleur parti est de faire excuse, when we are in the wrong, the best way is to ask pardon. 3d, Never suppress the unaccented e in the personal pronoun le, after il, as Il le portera à son frère, he will carry it to his brother; because the disappearance of the objective personal pronoun would injure the construction. 4th, Do not suppress the unaccented e, in me, te, se le, que, de, ce, ne, after a word ending with e mute, or a consonant sounding as if e mute were at the end of it, or a liquid sound; as, La sagesse de Socrate, the wisdom of Socrates; les coutumes de Paris, the customs of Paris; le commerce de Londres, the trade of London; le sévail de Constantinople, the seraglio of Constantinople. 5th, Never suppress the unaccented e, in words where the suppression would bring together three articulated consonants, as Surprenant, surprising; entrepôt, mart; écrevisse, craw-fish; propreté, cleanliness, &c., otherwise the pronunciation will become harsh, as, Surprenant, entropôt, écrivisse, propreté, &c. Lastly, the method of escaping the French unaccented e, in doucement, softly; à cela, to that; pas de courage, no courage, &c., is by leaning on the previous vowel, before coming to the next, in the same manner as an arch is resting on one of the two buttresses of a bridge, in order to reach the other.

190.—E Mute or Guttural.

One of the most important things in reading French, is the pronunciation of unaccented e's. Whenever the laws of pronunciation do not require them to be silent, it is a rule to sound them as eu short, whether they be initial, as venir, devoir, or medial, as convenir, changement, or final, as in le, me, e, se, de, ne, que. Observe that all French e's are deemed mute, are, in singing, invariably sounded guttural as eu; thus, la gloire de Napoléon, is sung, la gloa-reu deu Na-po-lé-on.

191.—E Mute or Nasal.

When e is followed by nt as ent, in such expressions as parent, ils parent, parent, they adorn; différent, ils diffèrent, different, they differ; précédent, ils précèdent, prior, they precede; couvent, ils couvent, convent, they brood; and others ending in the same manner, it frequently creates a difficulty in the pronunciation. But by paying attention to the pronoun ils, they, the reader can never be at a loss, for the rule requiring ent to be mute in verbs, is absolute and invariable.

192.—F.

However irreconcilable it may appear, to articulate f in courre le cerf, to hunt the stag, when it is invariably omitted in cerf; and to omit the same letter in bœuf in nerf de bœuf, part of the ox's body, when it is pronounced in bœuf; yet blind submission is necessary here, as well as in other cases, so as to put oneself in possession of a correct pronunciation.

193.—G.

This consonant not having the advantage, like c, to be accompanied with a sign, when employed in a soft capacity, an e is introduced between itself and the vowels a, o, u; as, il jugea, he judged; nous mangeons, we eat, &c. Observe that the liquidity of this letter, when joined to n, as, magnétisme, magnetism, which is now sounded ma-gné-tis-m, instead of mag-né-tis-m, is daily gaining ground.

194.—H.

There are many theories as to the aspiration of the h in French; some pretend that every word from the Greek or Latin has h initial mute; while others allege that all words derived from the Celtic, or from the ancient northern tongues, have h initial aspirated.

We are inclined to follow neither of these opinions, but prefer ascribing the aspiration of the initial h entirely to moral or physical causes; for, in examining the list of words, (70), Section XI. on irregular consonants, it will be seen that each of them expresses either an emotion of the mind or an action of the body. The following, for instance, have h aspirated: Hache, hatchet; hagard, wild; haine, hatred; harasser, to harass; hurler, to hurt; hideux, hideous; hoyau, pickaxe; hurlement, howling; hennir, to neigh, &c.; thus, from the nature of the above expressions, it will be seen that our theory, if not better than that of other grammarians, is at least as good.

Observe that h following c soft produces a sound which is of a singular character, resembling somewhat the hissing of a goose.

195.—I—OI as a Diphthong.

Formerly, all French imperfect and conditional tenses were written with o; as, favois, I had; proper names had also an o, as François, French; but of late, the o has been replaced by a, except in a few proper names; as, Vanouis, Dane, &c. There are four ways of sounding the above letters as a diphthong; namely, oi, oi, oi, or oi. As the first two pronunciations are recommended by some, and the last two by others, the reader would derive more advantage in sounding oi as oi, than oi, because the broad sound of oi being so difficult to be attained by foreigners, that diphthong is generally imperfectly pronounced by them.

196.—L Liquid.

Grammarians are not divided about the sound of oil, oil, oil, oil, oil; all agree that l should be sounded liquid; but the public in Paris differing on the propriety of sounding the l liquid, we would recommend the learner to drop the liquid sound in conversation, as, Alie for Alie, Versa-is for Versailles, cu-lèt for couillet, consè-is for conseil, &c.

197.—M, N Nasal.

The exact manner of pronouncing a French nasal sound, consists in taking care not to articulate the final m or n, otherwise the nasal sound would be imperfect; hence the reason why we have said, in the course of this treatise, that n and m final are mute, when they are preceded by a nasal vowel. The nasal sound is suppressed wherever the construction is not likely to suffer; as, son oncle est un bon officier, pronounce, so noncle est un bo nofficier; the dropping of the nasal sound is warrantable here, because the construction is not injured in the smallest degree.

198.—O.

It is the custom of aspirating this letter in the words oui, onze, as le oui et le non, the yes and the no; ses onze enfants, his eleven children: which is sounded as sé òn-s òn-fân.

199.—P, Q.

The above consonants give no cause for remarks, with this exception, that q is never seen without the vowel u immediately following it.

200.—R.

It is still an undecided question, whether this letter in notre, votre, our, your, before words beginning with a consonant, as, votre livre, your book, ought to be allowed to remain silent in conversation. That it is mostly the case, it cannot be denied; but no one has the courage to avow it. Observe that, among strangers, no allowance can be made.

201.—S.

The method of discovering whether s medial can or ought to be sounded as z, is by making certain whether it is placed between two vowels, and also by looking at the formation of the word; and if it be made of two, as, semblance, probability, the initial s of semblance then becomes hard. S is always sounded in ils, son; also in tous, all, when taken substantively. Observe, that the articulating of the s in les, as, sur les huit heures, at eight o'clock; sur les onze heures, about eleven o'clock; sur les une heure, at one o'clock; would be a gross fault in pronunciation.

202.—T.

The way of knowing when t is articulated as s, like in patience, patience; is, in general, by ascertaining if it be placed between two vowels; and, when two words are alike, as, portions, nous portions, portions, we carried; attentions, nous attentions, attentions, we attempted; the t of the verb is invariably hard. Observe that t in vingt, twenty, is always articulated from vingt et un, twenty-one, up to vingt-neuf, twenty-nine, inclusive.

203.—U, V.

When v is double, it is not very easy to ascertain its pronunciation; and although v seems to prevail, yet ou is heard in whig, whig; and a few other words. The vowel u, like o, is somewhat aspirated, in un, une, one; as cent un, one hundred and one; sur les une heures, about one o'clock.

204.—Y, Z, &

The first of these three letters has the vowel i for a substitute; the third, namely z, represents et.
